Seen & Heard Around Murray

We don't know why so much fun is being raised over firings in the state highway department. This department has always been the prime patronage area as far back as we can remember and whether one Democrat followed another, or whether parties changed, the same thing resulted. The only time this has not been the case is when one faction of either party was able to perpetuate itself for more than one term.

Fellow says you can't fool all of the people all of the time, but those highway interchange signs come pretty close to doing it.

The first-grade teacher, fresh from college, was taking over her initial class. Upon entering the classroom she noticed a nasty word scrawled on the blackboard followed by the signature "The Phantom."

So she said, "Now, children, let's fold our little hands, put them on our little desks, and put our little heads down on the desks and close our little eyes. Then the person who wrote this word can come up and erase it."

So they all folded their little hands, put them on their little desks and closed their little eyes. All was quiet for a while and then there was a patter of little feet scurrying back to a desk.

After everything was quiet again the teacher said, "Now (Continued on Page Eight)

LONDON (UPI) — As 38-year-old Mrs. Winifred Ewing, only member of the Scottish Nationalist party in the House of Commons stood up Friday, a "wolf whistle" sounded loud and clear from the lips of an unidentified male member of the House.

Personal Attention Pays, Mazak

Murray's tutoring program to provide personalized attention for grade school children with special needs is paying dividends — but more people from the community are needed as volunteer workers. Rev. Stephen G. Mazak told the Murray Lions Club Tuesday night.

"Many of the youngsters involved in this program have developed new attitudes," he said. "They can see that people do care about them and believe in them. Happier children and better report cards have been the result reported by several parents."

Mazak, a member of the local Lions Club and pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church, explained the purpose and the function of the program at the regular Lions Club dinner meeting at the Murray Woman's Club House.

Thirty-five students were selected from the upper three grades at Austin and Carter Schools last year. They attended sessions at Austin School twice a week from October to April where they received special attention in school subjects in which they had shown a lack of academic progress.

Operated as a part of the federal government's Title One project, the program is manned primarily by volunteers. Besides the academic importance, Rev. Mazak said the program provides culturally deprived children with an opportunity to meet new people and do new things. These new experiences broaden and enrich their lives, he added.

Professor Howard Gerrish, San Jose State College professor of industrial education and teacher trainer in electronics, was a guest at the meeting. Professor Gerrish is a visiting instructor at the NDEA Institute for Advanced Study in Industrial Arts at Murray State University this summer.

Rob Ray, a past president of the Murray Lions Club, presided at the meeting.

Four members of the club — Cody Caldwell, president; Lester Nanney, second vice president; Joe Pat Ward, third vice president; and George H. Ligon, immediate past president — are in Dallas for the 51st annual Lions National Convention. Ligon will be installed as governor of Lions International District 43-K during the convention.

Justice Abe Fortas

Liberals Continue To Dominate Court

by CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The promotion of Abe Fortas to chief justice would assure continued liberal leadership of the Supreme Court. His ability to rally a solid voting bloc remains to be determined.

Homer Thornberry, 59, of Texas, named to fill the vacancy caused by Chief Justice Earl Warren's retirement, is liberal by southern standards in matters where an individual's liberty is challenged by governmental authority.

In his three years on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, (See Editorial "Bad Selection")

Thornberry voted for the hard line yet taken against foot-dragging in school desegregation. His vote could be very important to Fortas.

President Johnson's appointment of the two men Wednesday raised immediate objections from some Republicans in the Senate, which must confirm both before they can take office. The threat of a filibuster was raised.

Forsee No Difficulty
But Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and GOP counterpart Everett M. Dirksen said they anticipated no great difficulty in getting the nominations through.

During the last term of the "warren court," which ended June 17, the chief justice usually could count on the votes in individual liberties cases of Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall, and Fortas. But for some time, the Senate's liberal reading of the Constitution occasionally has taken him out of this group, notably in civil rights demonstration cases.

By SCOTT B. BRUNS
LONDON (UPI) — James Earl Ray took the witness stand today in his fight against extradition and denied he was the assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Asked by his counsel "Did you kill Dr. Martin Luther King?" Ray replied quickly and in matter-of-fact tones: "No, sir."

Ray had entered the courtroom in historic Bow Street Magistrate Court chewing gum, his face already showing the beginning of five "lock shadow."

He hunched forward, his jaw muscles twitching from time to time, as British attorney David Calcutt acting for the United States said he was the "single hand" killer of King and demanded his return for trial as a murderer.

Illegal Passports

"Ray, who has been silent since his arrest at London airport June 8 on charges of having illegal passports and carrying a pistol, rose after his lawyer announced to a stunned court: "I call my client."

Ray, flanked by two Scotland Yard detectives, marched to the witness stand.

One of the Scotland Yard detectives guarding him against possible assassination attempts shifted between him and the main body of the court.

"I think you should sit here and take the oath seated," Magistrate Frank Milton said.

The attorneys and the magistrate then discussed under what name Ray should be sworn in. He was arrested as Ramon

BAD SELECTION

THE appointment of Abe Fortas to the post of Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, replacing Earl Warren, brings to mind how dangerous the precedent is to use this high court as a patronage area.

Of course President Johnson did not set the precedent, it was done long before he took office.

The Supreme Court, of all great bodies, should by all means be filled with men of unapproachable qualifications, and likewise with men who have no pronounced political bent.

We do not need extremists on the Supreme Court. Earl Warren is a pronounced liberal and now President Johnson appoints another man who is just as liberal, then compounds the situation by adding a Texas judge who most probably will follow the Johnson line to the letter.

President Johnson has been much more successful with his court than even President Roosevelt who attempted to pack it with hand-picked followers.

This juggling of the court in order to obtain favorable rulings is a dangerous game, with the American people as the inevitable loser.

We long for the day when the Supreme Court of the United States was looked upon as a group of men who decided cases on the law, not on emotion or liberal leanings.

President Johnson's latest action certainly placed this day further into the future.

761 Farmers Aided In Measures

The 1967 Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) aided 761 farmers in Calloway County in establishing needed soil, water, woodland and wildlife conservation measures on 15,477 acres, Ollie C. Hall, Chairman Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, has reported.

Throughout the country, about a million farmers and ranchers took part in the 1967 ACP, establishing conservation measures on 50 million acres. These measures protect our resources and help maintain the productive capacity of the Nation's farmland.

Under the Agricultural Conservation Program last year, conservation measures on 761 farms in the county represented a total investment of around $208,216. ACP cost-sharing accounted for about half this amount, and farmers matched the public investment with their own resources. Since similar investments were made by ACP and farmers in all of the Nation's agricultural counties, the rural and urban people of America in one year benefited from almost a half-billion dollars' worth of ACP conservation work.

In announcing national accomplishments under the 1967 ACP, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman pointed out that emphasis was on assisting more family-type farmers in undertaking comprehensive conservation practices and on encouraging low-income farmers and other producers who had not been practicing conservation to install needed measures on their land.

"These efforts," he said, "were aimed at accelerating conservation work to protect our farmland in order to provide our growing population with an assured abundance of food and clean water, and enhanced natural beauty, increased opportunities for the enjoyment of outdoor recreation, and other improvements in the quality of our environment."

Unfortunately, Secretary Freeman stated, the cost-sharing of conservation practices under ACP — by farmers and Government together — is not fully understood by many non-farm people. They do not recognize that the farmer may derive little or no immediate benefits from these practices, and often endures short-term losses. For example, farmers frequently take part of their better land out of crops to make way for sod waterways or structures to reduce erosion and prevent stream siltation and even flooding of whole communities miles away.

By sharing the cost of conservation measures, the Secretary said, "we help assure adequate preservation of our soil and water for meeting our food needs now and in the years ahead." The use of ACP funds takes into account the relative urgency of the conservation measures to be undertaken and the need for cost-sharing assistance in solving the conservation problem.

Grandma makes a loaf of bread in 4 hrs.

That's progress?

It's true. It takes a whole host of experienced Colonial bakers twice as long to make bread as one sweet old lady.

How come? Well, to us at Colonial Bakery, time is an ingredient. So we don't hold back. We use a lot of it.

We take extra time to let the yeast work naturally. Extra time to let the dough rest. Extra time to twist every loaf by hand. Before we call it a day we've actually spent 3 hours more than we really have to make each loaf of Colonial Bread. Some people tell us that's not a very good way to run a business. But it sure makes good bread. Why doesn't everybody make bread this way?

The gracious hostesses for the special event were Mrs. Charles Nanny, Mrs. Joe M. Parker, Mrs. J. R. Watson, Mrs. Rudolph Geurin, Mrs. Paul Ragdale, and Mrs. Edward Drake.

Hostesses presented Mrs. Hopkins with a lovely eight piece set of avocado green Club Aluminum. The many lovely gifts were displayed on red linen covered tables.

A coordinating color scheme of red and pink was used throughout the decorations. The refreshment table was arrayed with a mixed arrangement of pink and red carnations, atop a white cloth, cornered with pink and red crepe. Matching streamers skirted the table front.

Miss Rosetta Robertson and Miss Gedia Patchell, served cake and punch to the many guests that called between the hours of two to four o'clock in the afternoon. Miss Vicki Drake of Louisville, cousin of the bride, kept the register.

Dear Abby

Girl Too Young to Be on Her Own

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1968 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but nobody else will listen.

Abby, my mother is a first class A-1 square. I am nearly 13 years old and she treats me like I was four. She won't let me wear the kind of clothes I want. She won't let me use ANY make-up, and SHE tells me how I should fix my hair. I look like a creep. It is a wonder a boy will even look at me. I asked her if I could have boys come over and she said "NO, you are too young!"

She showed me something from your column about when a girl could be her own boss. You said when a girl can pay for her own education, buy her own clothes, pay for her room and board, dentist, doctor, and all that crud, she could be her own boss. Believe me, you didn't make any points with me.

What I want you to do, Abby, is to tell me how to convince my mother that I can be trusted with a boy. I am an honor roll student and it is time I had a few privileges. By the time my mother thinks I am "old" enough, nobody will want me.

NOWHERE GIRL

DEAR NOWHERE: Simmer down! I think your mother is right. Send me her name and address and I'll nominate her for MOTHER OF THE YEAR.

DEAR ABBY: There is a "swinger" who moved into our apartment building recently. She lives on our floor, and ever since she has moved in, my husband wants to empty the trash all the time.

She's big, blonde, and buxom, and I've never seen her in anything but a Japanese kimono.

I used to BEG my husband to take out the garbage, now he goes around the house looking for waste paper baskets to take to the incinerator room.

When he happens to see this lady in the hall, he stands around talking to her and getting his eyes full for 15 or 20 minutes. Should I worry?

THE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Not as long as he's in the hall.

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with you. You said, "Kissing, when inspired by honest affection, is instinctive. An inexperienced kisser may be clumsy at first, but with practice, he'll improve."

Sorry, but that wasn't true in my case. Before I met Joe I had been kissed by some talented amateurs. When I met Joe and started going with him, I discovered that he didn't know the first thing about how to kiss. I tried to teach him, but he never caught on. I married him anyway, and he still doesn't know how.

Abby, I just want to say that a man doesn't have to be an expert at kissing to show a woman how much he loves her. In fact, I regard my husband's uneducated kisses as all the more precious because it proves he hasn't been around very much.

LOVES JOE

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who was so upset because her neighbor named her dog "Lester"—which was her husband's name. When I married my second husband I had three little girls by my first husband. Shortly after we were married, my husband bought three small pigs, and he named them ROSE, JOYCE, and MARIE after my daughters.

People say pigs are dumb, but they aren't. Those pigs knew their names, and when my husband would call, "ROSE, JOYCE, and MARIE," the girls and the pigs would come running.

Anne Tittsworth Is Honored At Around The Clock Shower

Miss Anne Tittsworth, August 3rd bride-elect of John Steven Bennett, was complimented with an "around the clock" shower at the lovely home of Miss Mary Keys Russell on North Seventh Street on Monday, June 24, at seven o'clock in the evening.

The charming hostesses for the special occasion were Miss Russell, Miss Barbara Brown, Miss Shirley Cochran, and Miss Rita Hurd.

The bride-to-be chose to wear from her trousseau a pink linen dress and was presented a gardenia corsage by the hostesses. Mrs. Howard Tittsworth, the honoree's mother, and Miss Ruth Tittsworth, her sister, were also presented hostesses' gift corsages of gardenias.

Miss Tittsworth opened her many gifts selected to be used at a certain time of the day or night. The hostesses presented her with a portable electric mixer as a wedding gift.

The house was beautifully decorated throughout with arrangements of roses. Refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, and punch were served buffet style from the dining room table overlaid with a white linen cloth and centered with a gorgeous arrangement of white and yellow daisies. Silver appointments were used.

Those included in the hospitality were Misses Vickie Spiceland, Patricia Doran, Ruth Tittsworth, Madge McColium, Dorothy Alice Swann, Jane Belote, Kay Pinkley, Lyttis Whitford, Jackie Freer, Marion Belote, Mrs. Rodney Scott, Mrs. Ronnie Hutson, Mrs. Howard Tittsworth, the honoree, and the hostesses.

Mrs. Don Karr Elected President Of The United Daughters Of The Confederacy

The United Daughters of the Confederacy met June 19th for the regular meeting in the home of Mrs. Frank Holcomb on Dogwood Drive.

The hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Don Karr, Mrs. Rodney Scott and Mrs. Tommy Pierce, assisted by Mrs. Frank Holcomb and Mrs. Yandell Wraether.

As the guests arrived they were entertained by Mrs. Fred Gingles who played a medley of Stephen Foster songs on the electric organ.

The fifteen members present were seated at two elegantly appointed tables where arrangements of summer flowers, hand-some table linens, china and silver completed the setting. A delicious and colorful salad course and dessert constituted the menu.

After the luncheon the guests assembled in the spacious living room for an interesting program. Mrs. Pierce, who formerly taught in Savannah, Georgia, and who expects to make her future home there, showed slides of this typically Southern city and its environs. She related many incidents of the War Between the States that were connected with Savannah and this area.

A business session followed in which these officers were elected: President, Mrs. Don Karr; first vice president, Mrs. W. Z. Carter; second vice president, Mrs. E. A. Lassiter; recording secretary, Miss Mary Williams; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Fred Gingles; treasurer, Mrs. Leonard Vaughn; chaplain, Mrs. G. B. Scott; historian, Mrs. Hunt Smock; registrar, Mrs. Henry Elliott.

Mrs. Carter presided over the installation ceremony and the new president took the chair to appoint committees and finish the business.

Mrs. Pauline Speegle, formerly from Alabama, was received into the chapter as a new member and Mrs. Charles Farmer and Mrs. E. W. Riley were welcomed back as reinstated members.

This meeting concluded an active and interesting year for the chapter and all members are looking forward to the new year which begins with the September meeting.

SAM To Visit Residents Of Area Soon

SAM came to Murray on June 21. SAM won't visit everyone in June, but in the coming months SAM will be dropping in on more and more Murray Area residents. Recipients of questionnaires will be selected each month by random methods from internal records that will identify which customers have contacted the business office or repair service in the preceding month.

SAM stands for Service Attitude Measurement, the name of the new program established by Southern Bell to gauge telephone service quality and personnel performance.

According to R. K. Carpenter, local telephone manager, the measurement tool used in the program will be a questionnaire which will measure customer attitudes toward one of the following four service areas: (1) business office service, (2) repair service, (3) installation service, and (4) general service. A special questionnaire is designed for each area. Recipients of the general service questionnaire will be selected at random from all subscribers, regardless of the date of their last contact with the company.

Questionnaires will solicit customer reaction to such service aspects as attentiveness, promptness, and competence on the part of all telephone people who come into contact with the public. Also, opinions on the quality of local telephone service, information service, operator-handled long distance calls, calls dialed direct, and coin telephone service are sought. Customers are encouraged in each of the four questionnaires to give specific information, if they are dissatisfied, as to why they feel service has been unsatisfactory.

"The more specific our customers are, the better we like it," Mr. Carpenter said. "It's our business to serve the customer and if we aren't doing a job, we want to know about it — and fast. SAM is our direct pipeline from the public."

About 1,200 questionnaires will be sent out each month to customers in the Paducah district, of which Murray is a part. Mr. Carpenter said that the SAM survey is now conducted in about 40% of the area served by the 23 operating companies of the Bell System. That makes SAM the biggest public opinion survey undertaken anywhere on a continuing basis. And it's destined to get even bigger; ultimately the program will be extended to cover the Bell System's entire operating area.

MEN'S WEAR

Ivy League Succumbs To Fashion Revolution

By WALTER LOGAN
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Peacock Revolution has hit the Ivy League a staggering blow. The Ivy covered campuses now sparkle with colorful shirts instead of traditional button-downs and there are darts under the armpits of the classic three button suits. Such centers of learning as Yale, Harvard and Princeton have been bastions of conservatism since the day they were founded and their shadow of conformity has spread across the land to engulf almost every college and university. The high priest of the Ivy League look might well be Irving Press, and his temple the firm known as J. Press, which has its roots at Yale University, but by this fall will spread as far as San Francisco where barefoot, bearded students at Berkeley may be exposed to eastern sartorial culture. The so-called Peacock Revolution is, of course, the fashion revolution that has come over the men's wear industry in the past four or five years so we dropped in at J. Press the other day to see if the revolution had caught up with the staunchly conservative Ivy League. Irving Press, who is president of the firm, said indeed yes and that in certain areas the Ivy League was five or six years ahead. He cited in particular the four-inch-wide tie and said it had met with wide acceptance, especially by some elderly Elms who had never become resigned to the fact the wide tie had gone out of style. There has been shape in Ivy League suits for some time now, achieved by placing darts under the armpits, and there has even been extreme shape in British style hacking jackets (made in Ireland) which achieve even more shape by placing darts in the front. "Actually we've been in the forefront," Press said, "with a flair for color and the first use of the country suit." The country suit is a matching coat and pants in a bright distinct check, long worn in the British countryside but once considered a bit too racy for the American countryside. They are very new for Fall 1968 on the non-Ivy market but Press admits he has been making them for five years or so.

The colors are even brighter, woven into a new and heavier Saxony wool which has a greater concentration of colors than the softer Shetlands which were popular for years, probably because they were on the conservative (drab) side. Summer suits even have two buttons instead of the classic three and there are deep side vents—something never really accepted in Ivy League circles. And they are distinctly shaped. By Fall they could be even more so—plus the addition of hacking jackets with angled pockets and ticket pockets and more flair to the jacket skirt. Another innovation from the Ivy League were British Grenadier guardsmen type coats—double breasted, flared, broad lapels.

Another was the steep ridge cavalry twill which is now the rage in Peacock Revolution circles. Press has been using this for years, especially in the hacking jackets which are made in Ireland to his specifications. They also show up in a revival of the belted Norfolk jacket. As for shirts, wide spread collars are taking the place of the button-downs, and a non-button down which can be worn with or without a pin. The fashion colors are police-blue, canteloupe or olive—and those colors are in sports shirts which also are losing their buttons. A sidelight to the term "Ivy League." Many manufacturers hate the expression and refer to "soft shoulder" or "natural shoulder" suits—a practice which has led manufacturers of shoes to advertise "natural shoulder shoes" in the trade publications. As for the Nehru type jacket for the Ivy League crowd, Press was less than enthusiastic. "We have a few rich customers who may order one and throw it away after wearing it to a party but whether there is a germ in this for the future remains to be seen," he said.

let's see if the bad word is thoroughly erased. So they looked to see a new, nastier word followed by, "The Phantom Strikes Again!"

Almost fallish yesterday evening and early today.

A young Dove scared up as we came to town this morning. Just as trim as can be. The Dove is one bird you can recognize immediately from a silhouette because of the large pointed tail and definite body lines.

An old board lying there in the grass and we thought that we would just pick it up and move it. As we picked it up there was a veritable explosion of motion as it apparently covered the nest of a colony of large Black Ants. A huge pile of eggs was apparent and immediately the workers began to grab eggs to move them to safety. When we saw the suphuman task confronting this colony we figured what the heck, and just laid the board down again. Who'll know the difference ten years from now.

Television Workshop At MS Underway

Fifty principals, supervisors and teachers from 27 counties in Kentucky are taking part this summer in an educational television workshop at Murray State University.

Project MUST (Multi-Media Utilization through Statewide Television) began Monday and will run through July 19.

According to Dr. Franklin Fitch, project director, the federally-supported workshop has two purposes:

—To give each participant firsthand experience with educational television and in preparing and utilizing audio and visual teaching aids for teaching with television; and —To provide an opportunity for selected school leaders to prepare a practical in-service training program in educational TV for the teachers in their school system.

Dr. Fitch, who is a professor and director of audio-visual education at MSU, said the workshop is a step leading up to the inauguration of statewide educational television in Kentucky in the near future.

He said a similar program is scheduled to be offered the next two summers at Murray State.

The workshop participants are enrolled in related graduate education courses at MSU and will earn three hours of credit for each class.

Principal instructors during the five-week institute will be Dr. Fitch, Dr. Jerome Hainesworth of the MSU School of Education, and Rex Wadham of Brigham Young University.

Other MSU professors who will assist in the instruction are Dr. Arvin Crafton, Dr. Ray Moore, Eugene Russell, Miss Rubie Smith and John Wells, all of the School of Education; Dr. Albert Chapman, School of Business; Mrs. Karen Boyd, art division; Robert Jones, industrial education department; and Tom Morgan, communications department.

His latest preaching responsibility was as interim pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The Prices will be in and out of Murray for the rest of the summer until they move to Morehead about the middle of August.

CHAPTER 26

GREG CORWIN'S answer came. Another roar, lance of flame and the slapping whine of a bullet beside his ear. Greg flinched away but swung the Colt muzzle, following the vanishing figure as he pulled the trigger. Roar of gun partially drowned a scream. Greg heard a thrashing low on the ground over by the corner of the barn.

He did it. Just pulled my gun maybe a foot away, or less — pull the trigger.

"Why? Who's he?"

"Him! I'd run Anchor, he said, if Ralls was... Manage it until... after things blow over."

The voice faded away and Stern's body stiffened and then fell into the complete slackness of death. Greg struck his fourth match, let it burn down and then swung around, still at a crouch. "Cal?"

"Bullet gored my leg like a bull's horn but nothing broken. Just bleeding like a stuck pig." Greg hurried to the barn and by lantern light hitched the team to the buckboard. He rolled out and helped Cal to his feet and, with a few hopping steps, to the buckboard. The packed face, dark, haunted eyes caused the tourniquet to slip and blood flowed. As soon as Cal had stretched out, Greg applied the twisting pressure and the blood stopped.

Then Greg, carrying the lantern, went to Stern. He started as he held the lantern low. In death, the malignant expression that had so surprised him had settled permanently on Stern's features. Greg went through the man's pockets. There were all the usual things a puncher would carry, nothing more.

Greg replaced the knife, coins and a faded handkerchief and started to lift the man. He felt something thick around the waist. Greg ripped down the trousers to disclose a new money belt. Within it, Greg found bright gold coins. Twenty-dollar pieces — six hundred dollars.

Greg studied the golden glint in the lantern's glow and then replaced them, swung money belt over his shoulder, and dragged the body to the buckboard and, with a series of heaves, Hal Stern finally fell beside Cal Weber, who edged away.

Greg snuffed out the lantern, jumped up into the seat and snapped reins over the team. They rolled out of Tumbling T in the dark night toward Redman. Cal cursed softly now and "Knew—all the time. Knew too much. You could tell—and I tried."

"To shut me up?" Stern didn't answer and Greg asked sharply, "Why did you kill Sam?"

"He said... easy the way I did it. Just pulled my gun maybe a foot away, or less — pull the trigger."

George Sneyd. It was decided not to swear him in at all but merely to have him answer his counsel's questions.

"Are you the man arrested at London Airport June 8?" his attorney Roger Frisby asked.

"Yes, Sir," replied Ray. "Did you know Martin Luther King personally?"

"No, sir."

"Did you have a grudge against him?" Frisby asked.

"No, sir," Ray said. He spoke quickly and clearly and betrayed little emotion.

Then Frisby asked: "Did you kill Dr. Martin Luther King?"

And with no change of expression and almost matter-of-factly came the denial.

"The whole burden of my case is that Dr. King is a political figure." The extradition agreement between the United States and Britain does not cover political crimes.

Sneyd asked: "Did you kill Dr. Martin Luther King?"

And with no change of expression and almost matter-of-factly came the denial.
